The Catcher in the Rye

I've _____Past tense verb_____in New York all my life, and I know Central Park like the back of my _____Noun_____ because I used to _____Verb_____there all the time and ride my bike when I was a kid, but I had the most _____Adjective_____trouble finding that lagoon that night. I knew right where it was--it was right near _____Location_____Location_____Location_____and all--but I still couldn't find it. I kept _____Verb ending in ing_____and _____Verb ending in ing_____ and it kept getting _____Adjective_____and _____Adjective_____and _____Adjective_____and _____Adjective_____. I didn't see one _____Noun_____the whole time I was in the park. I'm just as glad. I probably would've _____Past tense verb_____about a mile if I had. Then, finally, I found it. What it was, it was partly frozen and partly not frozen. But I didn't see any _____Plural noun_____around. I walked all around the whole lake--I nearly fell in once, in fact--but I didn't see a single _____Noun_____. I thought maybe if tehre were any around, they might be asleep or somethign near the edge of the water, near the grass and all. That's how I _____Adverb_____fell in. But I couldn't find any.
