Item 28. B

I was a _____Noun_____ of some sort. I'm not clear on whether this was literal or physical. But I was one. I liked it.

I was being coerced to film a _____Noun_____. I woke up in _____Location_____ with my hand on my _____Noun_____

It was made all the more _____Adjective_____ being that I share a bed with my _____Noun_____ currently. More on that later.

Pushing that aside, I closed my _____Noun - Plural_____ and went back to sleep.

The second dream was more appropriate. I'm not exactly sure where I'd landed this time around.

I was floating in _____Noun_____. Meters away, I could see a _____Noun_____. There was a purple jellyfish swimming circles around me. It was giggling. Something about _____Noun_____. _____Adjective_____. It was joined by _____Noun_____. Then another. I became _____Adverb_____ in the blink of an eye. They circled me as they moved closer. Their chatter became unbearable.

It

was a clear, cold, crisp night. I was at an _____Noun_____ with _____Noun - Plural_____ whose faces I never saw. At one corner of the _____Noun_____ there was a large standing _____Noun_____ attached to a tree bough. Rather I assumed it was. Couldn't be bothered to lift my chin and see it . The assumption worked well enough. There was a _____Noun_____ on it. They looked so out of place. Hanging over the intersection and oncoming traffic; completely unconcerned with their own safety and well-being. They flailed and gestured as they spoke. They were yelling sounded like a _____Noun_____. Curiosity got the best of me. I moved closer. I needed to know what they were saying. I was about four paces away when --

I stood atop a _____Noun_____. Though water crashed into and around me with _____Adjective_____ _____Noun_____, I remained unmoved. I had a(n) _____Noun_____ in my hand. I was sure it didn't belong to me. So I let it go. Rather, I tried. It refused.

So I tried again. Over and over. Again. I was so frustrated, I screamed. It sounded like a _____Noun_____.

I jumped.
