A New Friend

Once upon a time, in _____ Proper noun there was a lonely _____ Adjective puppy named Peanut. He lived in a _____ Adjective house surrounded by tall _____ Plural noun and a _____ Adjective brook. He had a room full of _____ Plural noun and a huge big screen television so that he could watch his favourite shows. He had lots of room to _____ Verb and play, but he was still very lonely. His owners worked half an hour away, in _____ Proper noun which left him alone in that large house all day. Every day he wished for a friend to play with. One day, his owners came home with a crate. They put it in the _____ Noun and left the door open. Curious, went to investigate. As he approached the crate he could hear noise coming from inside. He looked in through the door and saw another puppy. _____ Interjection he thought, a friend to play with. My wishes have finally come true. Slowly, the puppy poked its head out of the crate and sniffed around. Peanut started barking trying to get the puppy to come and play, but every time he barked, the puppy went back inside. Peanuts owners, after hearing all the noise, came in to tell him to leave her alone. Peanut sat there and waited, but she never came out. After what seemed like hours, Peanut said, "What is your name?" No answer. Peanut asked the same question again, but a little louder this time. Still no answer. Frustrated, Peanut decided to take his owners advice and leave her alone. As he turned to leave, she said, "wait". He stopped and turned around. She spoke again. "I don't have a name." "Well," said Peanut, "come out so we can give you a name." She did finally come out of the crate and Peanut noticed how beautiful she was. _____ Interjection he said, "you are very beautiful." Just as he finished his sentence, his owners came in and said, "She is very beautiful, let's call her Bella." "What a wonderful name!" thought peanut. "Hey Bella," said Peanut "do you want to
