The Propsal

After months of planning and extensive _____Noun_____ shopping Peter had a plan: _____Proper Noun_____ D.C.! On the same weekend in March, the Humphrey School had conveniently set a _____Adjective_____ trip for Peter and Amy had interviews for her PMF Fellows Program. While the actual festival had not yet begun, the cherry blossom _____Noun - Plural_____ had bloomed two weeks early, and it seemed everything would work out perfectly. Peter planned an exciting day of apartment _____Noun_____, _____Verb - Present Tense_____ St. Patrick's Day, and going to see the monuments. After taking a crowded but pleasant stroll by the Washington Monument, the MLK Memorial, and around the Tidal Basin, Peter pulled Amy off to the side of the FDR Memorial and got down on one knee. After _____Verb - Present Tense_____ his love he asked her to marry him. Amy said yes! The crowd around them _____Verb - Past Tense_____ and a kind observer even took _____Noun - Plural_____ of the proposal! She was not surprised by it all but Peter is not so sure ;-). (Amy could tell Peter was _____Adjective_____ and _____Adjective_____ that day. She had picked up on his hints about big things happening very soon and knew something was up when Peter was very concerned about the schedule for the day).
