More stories at WordBlanks.com

China and Obama

1. Noun _____
2. Noun _____
3. Noun _____
4. Noun _____
5. Noun _____
6. Noun _____
7. Noun _____
8. Noun _____
9. Noun _____
10. Noun - Plural _____
11. Noun _____
12. Noun - Plural _____
13. Noun - Plural _____
14. Noun _____
15. Noun _____
16. Noun - Plural _____
17. Noun _____
18. Noun _____
19. Noun _____
20. Noun _____

China and Obama

PRESIDENT XI: (As interpreted.) In the first _____Noun_____ that I've had with President Obama this afternoon, we had an in-depth, sincere and candid _____Noun_____ on the domestic and foreign policies of China and the United States, on our joint work to build a new model of major country _____Noun_____, and our international and regional issues of mutual interest. And the President and I reached important _____Noun_____ on these issues.

I stated very clearly to President Obama that China will be firmly committed to the path of peaceful _____Noun_____ and China will be firm in deepening reform and opening up the country wider to the _____Noun_____. China will work hard to realize the Chinese dream of the great national _____Noun_____ and will work hard to push forward the noble cause of peace and development for all _____Noun_____.

By the Chinese dream, we seek to have economic prosperity, national renewal and people's well-being. The Chinese dream is about cooperation, _____Noun_____, peace and win-win, and it is connected to the American Dream and the beautiful dreams people in other _____Noun - Plural_____ may have.

President Obama and I both believe that in the age of economic _____Noun_____ and facing the objective need of countries sticking together in the face of difficulties, China and the United States must find a new path -- one that is different from the inevitable confrontation and conflict between the major _____Noun - Plural_____ of the past. And that is to say the two sides must work together to build a new model of major country relationship based on mutual respect and win-win cooperation for the benefit of the Chinese and American _____Noun - Plural_____, and people elsewhere in the world.

The international community _____Noun_____ to China and the United States to deliver this. When China and the United States work together, we can be an anchor for world stability and the propeller of world _____Noun_____.

I stand ready to work with President Obama to expand on all levels of _____Noun - Plural_____ between the two sides . I look forward to maintaining close communication with the President through mutual _____Noun_____, bilateral meetings, exchange of letters and phone calls. And I invited President Obama to come to China at an appropriate time for a similar meeting like this. And we look forward to visiting each other _____Noun_____.

At the same time, the two sides will work hard to make _____Noun_____ in the various bilateral mechanisms, such as the strategic and economic dialogue and the high-level consultation on people-to-people exchange. Also, the Chinese Minister of Foreign Affairs and the Chinese Minister of National Defense will both make visits to the United States within the _____Noun_____.

©2026 WordBlanks.com · All Rights Reserved.