Parallel Structure is Awesome

Parallel structure is _____Adjective_____ for your _____Noun_____ because it adds clarity, focus and _____Adjective_____ to your writing. If you feel like your _____Noun_____ could use some flair to _____Verb - Base Form_____ up its otherwise _____Adjective_____ ideas, then using parallel structure can be an _____Adjective_____ way of making you sound not informed, but _____Noun_____. In fact, we use parallel structure in our _____Verb - Present ends in ING_____ all the time without even knowing it. When you write a thesis statement which lists the ideas that you plan to address subsequently in your paper, the process you're engaging in is parallel structure. It's a practice that is effective on the word, sentence, clause and even paragraph level. It's helpful to become acquainted with this practice early in your college career, so that it becomes almost second nature. Your reader will appreciate it, and you will notice that your writing will take on a professional voice. Structuring your thoughts can be a challenging endeavor, but by engaging in parallelism, your thoughts can almost magically begin to structure themselves.
