OOZE AND AAAAHS!

I will never forget the night it happened. It was a(n) Adjective night, and I was relaxing upstairs with my Noun, a good book and my faithful Animal, PET'S Pets name. Suddenly there was a loud Noise. I sprang to my feet and crept downstairs, trying to be as Adjective as I could. Nothing looked out of the ordinary. Suddenly I heard the Noise again, but this time it was much more Adjective and I knew it was coming from the basement. Summoning my courage, I grabbed a flashlight and strode Adverb down the stairs. I might have met my end right there, if not for PET'S Noun, who let out a loud "Noise!" Startled, I jumped Adverb to the side just in time to avoid a long gooey appendage. I turned my flashlight on the intruder and gasped in horror. Lurking there in my basement, bathed in the Adjective glow of my light, was a huge, quivering, shapeless blob of ooze! The hideous thing was as Color as a Noun and as big as a(n) Noun. "Exclamation!" I cried. I fled Adverb upstairs, but the thing chased me with lightning speed. I was trapped, and knew I had to fight if I wanted to survive. First I tried to chop it with a sharp Noun from the kitchen, then I shot it with my grandpas Noun that hangs over the fireplace. In desperation, I even tried throwing Liquid on it, but all to no avail. It just kept coming. I thought I was dead for sure, when suddenly a strange figure crashed through my window and leapt between us! He was tall and Adjective, with fierce Adjective eyes and Adjective shoulders. He was dressed entirely in black, except for his Color Clothing.

" _____ Exclamation _____!" the figure cried, and quick as a(n) _____ Animal _____ he jumped in and stunned the ooze creature with a powerful kick.

Without pause he scooped the thing into a(n) NOUN and tied it shut with a long _____ Noun _____.

"How did you do that?!" I gasped, trying to catch my breath.

"Their only weakness is their _____ Body Part _____ PART," he replied. "One good kick and the things are helpless."

"But how do you find it?" I asked, staring at the shapeless mass.

"That is easy," said the stranger. "It is right next to their _____ Body Part _____ PART."

I thanked him for saving my life and asked him his name. "I am _____ Foreign word _____ WORD, and I have been hunting the ooze creatures all my life. Join me in my quest and we will make the world safe from their _____ Adjective _____ evil!"

Now that I knew the truth, how could I say no? I joined _____ Foreign word _____ WORD that night and my life has never been the same. I learned how to spot their _____ Body Part _____ PART in less than _____ Number _____ seconds, and together we have defeated over _____ Number _____ of the ooze creatures. I even got my own _____ Color _____ _____ Clothing _____.
