My Summer in Marketing -- A Madlib

It was a _____Noun_____ come true when I found out my application and _____Noun_____ landed me the temporary marketing position. After a lot of curiosity, I'd _____Adverb_____ be able to see firsthand what REI's Marketing Department was all about.

The first couple of weeks were a _____Adjective_____ a review crash-course in all things _____Noun_____. There was reporting to be done, project plans to _____Verb - Base Form_____, numbers stories to understand and help others to tell, proofs to _____Verb - Base Form_____, and _____Noun - Plural_____, lots of _____Noun - Plural_____!

In the newness, I found familiarity and comfort in knowing the _____Noun_____ of REI. I was happy to offer this _____Noun_____ my customer insight earned from working in Sales & Customer Support, and I was even _____Adjective_____ to have those insights _____Verb - Past Tense_____. One thing this team did very well was to bring me into the action. From the beginning I was encouraged to contribute and my _____Noun - Plural_____ were valued.

This summer, I also took the opportunity to meet a lot of _____Noun - Plural_____. My conversations helped me better understand the org chart, as well as determine areas of interest, and opportunities for collaboration within the Marketing Department. Although things are pretty _____Adjective_____ around here, the level of _____Noun_____ was very high as almost everyone I reached out to was able to make time to meet with me.

consideration of everything I've learned, and the amount of people that I've _____Verb - Past Tense_____ within a relatively short period of time, I'd say this summer was mission accomplished! Unfortunately just as I'm _____Verb - Present ends in ING_____ greater familiarity with the work, and confidence in my ability to contribute more _____Adverb_____, my time with this group is nearly over.

I appreciate all the encouragement and the feedback I've _____Verb - Past Tense_____ along the way, as well as the resources and help with projects. The biggest surprise and greatest honor _____Verb - Past Tense_____ when I received a Zippy award for my work on the direct mail binders for Annie. I thank Katherine and each one of you for making that happen!
