Her Side of The Story

It was the start of my _____Proper Noun_____ year at Penn and classes had not started yet. I went out with some of my friends and ended up at McDonald's on 40th street. While sitting with my friend and soror Ashley, I noticed this _____Adjective_____ guy sitting with a few other _____Proper Noun_____ we knew. I pointed him out to her and we both started _____Proper Noun_____. To be honest, that wasn't the first time I noticed JP. A few months prior, I saw him at a _____Noun_____, but let's just say he wasn't in the best state of mind for conversation. After noticing him, a quick _____Proper Noun_____ search revealed that he was from Bloomfield (literally the next town over from where I grew up), and he went to MKA (my rival high school). With this information in tow, I was ready for Ashley to make an introduction...

After our McDonald's rendezvous, I knew I had to see him again. The next night while at _____Proper Noun_____ with my sorors, I was eager to "bump" into JP. I sent a quick text out to one of his friends, and found out they were at a party at the basketball house. At that party, we spoke until the music stopped. I found this guy so _____Adjective_____ and way more _____Adjective_____ than anyone else I had met, even though he was younger than me. He suggested we have lunch that weekend, and even though I thought he was so _____Adjective_____, I was _____Adjective_____. Well, he was a _____Noun_____ of his word and we met for lunch at _____Proper Noun_____ the next day. At Cosi we ate, and talked, and talked, and talked...For nearly five hours.

Later that week, we went on our first official date to the _____Proper Noun_____ _____Proper Noun_____ _____Proper Noun_____. After dinner, he suggested we _____Proper Noun_____ back to campus. It was still warm, a slight mist was in the air, and we sang _____Proper Noun_____ _____Proper Noun_____ as we _____Proper Noun_____. It was cute, until my freshly pressed hair started to frizz and I kindly suggested taking a _____Proper Noun_____ back to campus.

To this day, I still get _____Proper Noun_____ in my stomach and excited to _____Proper Noun_____ _____Proper Noun_____ with the cute guy from McDonalds.
