Road Trip Story

My first road trip was _____Adjective_____. When I turned 24 years old, my father lent me his car to go from Los Angeles to Chicago. I told my dad that my friend George was _____Verb - Present ends in ING_____ with me, and he was bringing his _____Adjective_____ _____Noun - Plural_____. My dad liked that George was going, because he was a _____Adjective_____ _____Adjective_____ adult, which made me think that my dad doesn't think of me as an _____Noun_____. When the day we were scheduled to leave arrived, George's _____Noun_____ didn't arrive at my house until 5 p.m. when we agreed we would _____Verb - Base Form_____ at 2 p.m.

It wasn't bad. I had been waiting for this _____Noun_____ for a year. I could _____Verb - Base Form_____ a little longer. When Nancy arrived, we packed up her _____Noun_____ and hit the _____Noun_____. I was friends with both of them, but George was my friend first. I started getting annoyed with them right away. Even though I had my _____Noun - Plural_____ playing in the car, I could _____Adverb_____ hear them in the back _____Verb - Present ends in ING_____ and calling each other baby, sweetie, sweetheart, and other nauseating cute names. I didn't like it, but what was I going to _____Verb - Base Form_____?

George took over the wheel after we left California. He was _____Verb - Present ends in ING_____ to Nancy the whole time. When we got near the Grand Canyon, Nancy started talking about how she always wanted to go see _____Noun - Plural_____. That was when George said those _____Adjective_____ words I hated the most, "What my baby wants, my baby gets." He started going down a road that led to the Grand Canyon without even _____Verb - Present ends in ING_____ . I started to get really _____Adjective_____, but decided not to say anything. It was really _____Adjective_____, but they didn't care. It turned out the road that led to the Grand Canyon closed after a certain time.

Nancy felt embarrassed, and George started _____Verb - Present ends in ING_____ . After we got back on the highway, I _____Verb - Past Tense_____ all the way to Chicago. George knew that I was bugged, so he tried to keep me company. He even told Nancy to _____Verb - Base Form_____ in the back, which she did. It was a _____Adjective_____ drive. I couldn't believe I had to drive all the way back to Los Angeles with _____Noun - Plural_____.
