Figurative Language Story?

The song _____song title_____ makes me feel as _____Adjective_____ as a _____Noun_____. Which is why I listened to it during class instead of paying attention to the lesson. It was kind of a crazy class. The classroom was a _____Event_____. The teacher was out today. They say he was as sick as a _____Animal_____. Our sub was Mr. Michaels. Mr. Michaels made us mop mucus mats in _____Location_____. I thought we would hate that, but it was actually a lot more fun than our usual classwork, especially with the music. It was nice seeing all the soap bubbles _____action a human can do_____ across the floor as we cleaned. It was hard work, and by lunch time I was so hungry I could eat a _____Animal_____! We got to the cafeteria and I took my seat. _____Onomatopoeia_____! The sound caught the whole room's attention before I could even take a bite. _____Onomatopoeia_____! and then _____Onomatopoeia_____! The one making the racket was our sub Mr. Michaels. He strutted into the cafeteria like _____famous person_____. "This ceiling isn't the best, but it's up there." he announced before taking his seat. I turned my attention back to my lunch. Today's meal was mystery soup. I took a spoonful. It made a _____Adjective_____ sound as I lifted the spoon from the bowl. It was boiling hot and the heat radiated of the spoon like a _____Noun_____ on fire in July. It smelled _____Adjective_____ and tasted _____Adjective_____. Once I was finished everyone agreed that it looked pretty ugly, but tasted awfully good.
