3. Plural Noun _____

test

The _____Noun_____has become an integral part of our lives because it is _____Adjective_____. That means people are _____Plural noun_____of information, rather than simply passive receivers of â??oldâ?? media. Most importantly of all, we can talk to each other without gatekeepers or editors. This offers exciting possibilities for new social networks, which are enabled â?? but not determined â?? by digital technology. (Rushkoff, 2010)

All of this has great import to the evolving paradigm of communication in our culture. How is writing changing with this paradigm. What are the implications for the future? What is the poetential for good? . . . bad? How do you feel about these changes?

After reading the Rushkoff essay, write a critical analysis of it and of this issue in general. Be thoughtful and comprehensive.
