The Stranger

Nearly all the women wore _____Article of clothing_____ and the strings drawn tight round their _____Body part (plural)_____made their big stomachs bulge still more. I'd never yet noticed what big _____Plural noun_____old women usually have. Most of the men, however, were as _____Adjective_____as _____Plural noun_____ and they all carried _____Plural noun_____. What struck me most about their _____Body part (plural)_____was that one couldn't see their _____Body part (plural)_____ only a _____Adjective_____glow in a sort of nest of wrinkles.

On _____Verb ending in ing_____down, they _____Past tense verb_____at me, and _____Past tense verb_____their _____Body part (plural)_____awkwardly, their _____Body part (plural)_____sucked in between their _____Adjective Body part (plural)_____. I couldn't decide if they were _____Verb ending in ing_____me and trying to say something, or if it was due to some infirmity of age. I inclined to think that they were _____Verb ending in ing_____me, after their fash- ion, but it had a _____Adjective_____effect, seeing all those old fellows _____Past tense verb_____round the keeper, _____Adverb_____Verb ending in ing_____me and _____Verb ending in ing_____their _____Body part (plural)_____from side to side. For a moment I had an _____Adjective_____impression that they had come to _____Verb_____in judgment on me.
