Re-Writing History - The Gettysburg Address

score and seven years ago our _____Noun brought forth on this _____Noun a new _____Noun conceived in _____Adjective and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created _____Adjective.

Now we are engaged in a great _____Event war, testing whether that nation, or any nation so conceived and so dedicated, can long endure. We are met on a great _____Noun of that war. We have come to dedicate a portion of that field, as a final resting place for those who here gave their _____Noun that that nation might _____Verb. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this.

But, in a larger sense, we can not dedicate -- we can not consecrate -- we can not hallow -- this ground. The brave men, _____Adjective and _____Adjective who struggled here, have _____Past tense verb it, far above our _____Adjective power to add or detract. The world will little note, nor long remember what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here. It is for us the _____Adjective rather, to be dedicated here to the unfinished _____Noun which they who fought here have thus far so nobly advanced. It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the _____Adjective task remaining before _____First name -- that from these _____Adjective dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of _____Noun -- that we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in _____Adjective -- that this _____Noun under _____Noun shall have a new birth of freedom -- and that government of the _____Noun by the _____noun for the _____noun shall not perish from the _____Noun.
