Lady Lugnut's Surprise

It was a _____Adjective_____and _____Adjective_____day when Lady Lugnut went out for a walk with her _____Animal_____Biscuit. As they were _____Adverb_____Verb ending in ing_____down the sidewalk, Lady Lugnut noticied a _____Adjective_____puddle right in her path. She lifted her right foot to begin stepping over it when suddenly a hand of some sort _____Past tense verb_____out of the puddle and grabbed Lady Lugnut and pulled her in. She _____Past tense verb_____and closed her _____Body part (plural)_____as her hand tightly gripped Biscuit's leash. When she opened her _____body part (plural)_____ she looked around in awe of the scene right before her _____body part (plural)_____. The sky was a light pink and giant marshmallows floated in the sky as if they were clouds. Then, Lady's eyes scanned down to the squishy blue ground and she tried to walk but realized that every step was very difficult and felt as if she had stepped in a huge pile of chewed bubblegum on the sidewalk. She had let go of her dog's leash by accident and watched as Biscuit began leaping away into the distance. Then she began to wonder what had snatched her up from the puddle in the first place. She slowly turned her head and saw a big green monkey-like creature staring at her curiously. It was wearing a neon yellow loin cloth and had a flowing red mane of hair. Once again, Lady Lugnut screamed and tried to run away but was finding it a very hard task in the gummy, sticky ground beneath her heels. She stumbled and fell face-first into the blue, nasty ground. All at once she was pulled up out of the goop by the strange monkey creature. After that, she realized this must be a nice creature and they quickly became friends and talked over bacon-flavored tea. Lady Lugnut learned that this creature had a name and it was Sibuna.She was also greeted by many of the creature's friends, including the meatloaf buffalo, bagel cat, and of course the sweet cornbread bunnies. Soon it was time for Lady to leave and Sibuna found her dog Biscuit and led her back to the puddle portal back home. Lady Lugnut and Biscuit never forgot the wonderful adventure they had with Sibuna the monkey creature and the funky world they had encountered.
