

Shakespeare Theater

1. Noun
2. Noun
3. Noun
4. Noun
5. Noun
6. Noun
7. Noun
8. Noun
9. Noun
10. Noun
11. Noun
12. Noun
13. Noun
14. Noun
15. Noun

Shakespeare Theater

Shakespeare _____^{Noun} opened up in 1598 in London Bankside district. It was built on the _____^{Noun} River in _____^{Noun}. His theater was one out of the four largest theaters in that area. _____^{Noun} theater can sit up to 3,000 people. The stage of the Globe was a level platform about 43 feet in width some 27 or 28 feet deep that was _____^{Noun} about five feet off the ground. . The stage was _____^{Noun} with a number of mechanisms (trap doors in its floor for instance), and distinct sections (e.g., a sub-stage space toward its back lip for parallel action) that were creatively utilized by Shakespeare in his stage directions. Special effects at the Globe were also a good _____^{Noun} at the theater allowing for smoke effects the firing of real canon fireworks for dramatic _____^{Noun} scenes and spectacular flying entrances from the rigging in the heavens. For the start of the play the crowds were entertained outside of the theater at no _____^{Noun}. A short play of which included songs and dances were performed at the "Green Shows" (green shows are a festival that had shows that usually last 35 minutes long). And most of the performances last up to 2 _____^{Noun} long. 5 years before the opening of _____^{Noun} theater Shakespeare of a different company of the theater with the Queen Elizabeth 1. Then he _____^{Noun} that theater to go make his own theater called the Globe Theater. Also there was no lighting in Shakespeare Theater so all the _____^{Noun} were during the day and sometime in the _____^{Noun} of the afternoon. So really it was between 2 p.m. from 5 p.m. Also as soon as a play was _____^{Noun} it was immediately produced. Days out at the Globe Theater would have been an exciting event.

