Clues your Illusion

It was all starting to make sense! Maybe these weren't random, disconnected clues! Maybe they were all pieces to a much bigger puzzle! Listen:

If Ethan headed towards _____City_____maybe he did see a _____Noun_____. And what do _____Plural noun_____and high school kids have in common? Exactly, _____Connection_____. But it doesn't stop there. _____Character_____said that s/he last saw Ethan at _____Location_____ which means the last thing we know Ethan was doing was _____Connection_____. Now, if the letter that claimed Ethan was in/at _____Location_____was right, we can surmise that he was _____Verb ending in ing_____there. And who is most famous for _____Verb ending in ing_____? That's right _____Historical character_____

And if we take a look at _____Connection_____ _____Connection_____ and _____Historical character_____ it's pretty obvious that Ethan is totally missing.

I had nothing. The clues dried up like cherries you put on a salad. And then, to be honest, things settled down into a new normal. Life went on for everyone else. And Ethan became schroedinger's cat. He existed and didn't at the same time. The up side of that is that I finally got to put my minor in philosophy to use, the down side is that I have no idea where this kid is... and now I've got to look in two plains!
