Dear Proper noun

I am sure if you are not dead you have heard the news. They have finally finished the Noun bomb and set it off. I am now living with a Adjective Adjective girl, Proper noun. We both have the odd ends of life here, up on the hill. She, a little overweight is often called Truck. She likes Noun and Noun. She didn't fit in with the other girls on the hill like me. But that could be understood. I mean think about how many girls you know that like mechanics and art and still fit in. Any way, she seems lie a nice girl. I have so far finished my Noun and time Noun. The dump here is great. They have all the nuts and bolts I can imagine.

Oh! Did you hear about the Adjective glass sea? We went the other day. Literally Adjective glass stretches on for as long as you can see. I have some saved. That was the good news of the day. But as you know bad comes next. Proper noun died. If you had a Noun you would come find me to comfort me after this Adjective happening. But I am not sure if do since you ran away from home.

` I am still waiting for you,

Dewey
