Proposal

I proposed to Angela on Valentine's Day _____a year_____. The weather was one of the worst _____Adjective_____ storms of the season and she was out of town all _____length of time_____ taking a _____Verb - Present ends in ING_____ exam. Needless to say she was a little worn out when she returned to Fredonia. Despite her exhaustion, that night I took her to Applebees. I chose Aplebees because due to the test I couldn't make _____Noun_____ ahead of time. Dinner went well, but we ran into some _____Noun - Plural_____. Reluctantly I decided to let them _____Verb - Base Form_____ with us. The dinner conversation was more _____Adverb_____, but made the evening less _____Adjective_____. There I was with the _____Noun - Plural_____ against me... When we returned to the dorms I had let my _____job_____, Jeff, know that we needed the room for the night so that I could _____Verb - Base Form_____ in peace. I had purchased Valentine's _____Verb - Base Form_____, _____Noun_____, and a _____Noun_____.

When she walked in I had _____Verb - Past Tense_____ rose petals in a path to my bed and scattered some on my _____furniture_____ for atmosphere. I also used a battery lantern (since I couldn't use _____Noun - Plural_____) to further create a romantic mood. The mood was set, the _____Noun - Plural_____ were in place, and when Angela came in I opened the _____Noun - Plural_____ she gave me, she opened mine and then I gave her the _____Noun_____. On the card I wrote a poem that intentionally wasn't finished. I made sure that she opened it last having her _____Verb - Base Form_____ the poem aloud _____Preposition_____ me. As she finished I asked her if there was anything else written, she said no with a questioning look on her face. I took the card back from her pretending to finish the _____Noun_____. My farce included dropping my _____Noun_____. On the floor, under my bed I had secretly stashed the box with the _____Noun_____. _____Verb - Present ends in ING_____ down to grab my _____Noun_____ I maneuvered to a _____Adjective_____ kneel. In a _____Adjective_____ motion I returned the card to Angela while holding the box open. _____Adverb_____ she read the last line of her poem; "Will you _____Verb - Base Form_____ me?" Her _____body part_____ moved to mine and saw the ring. She said _____exclamation_____, and _____Number_____ years later, here we are.
