

Judicial Externship

1. Noun - Plural
2. Adjective
3. Adjective
4. Adjective
5. Noun - Plural
6. Noun
7. Noun - Plural
8. Noun - Plural
9. Adjective
10. Noun - Plural
11. Adjective
12. Noun
13. Adjective
14. Verb - Base Form
15. Noun
16. Adjective
17. Verb - Base Form
18. Verb - Base Form
19. Noun - Plural
20. Verb - Past Tense
21. Noun - Plural
22. Noun - Plural
23. Noun - Plural

24. Verb - Past Tense

25. Adjective

Judicial Externship

This is a mad lib about Judicial Externship. Judicial Noun - Plural have been described as Adjective, educational, Adjective, intimidating, and Adjective. Some externships are filled with writing, research, and Noun - Plural. Others are filled with Noun, discussions, and networking. In class, we all come together to discuss our Noun - Plural and Noun - Plural we face or may face in the legal world. We also have discussions that are Adjective and focus on supplementing our experiences. Our book is filled with Noun - Plural. If we could describe our professor in one word, we would say she is Adjective.

In comparing and contrasting federal and state court, federal court is filled with more Noun and less attorney control. State court is more Adjective and has more freedom for the attorneys. In both systems, a surprising aspect of the judges was a fear of Verb - Base Form and a reluctance to create their own Noun. Regardless of the system, we found both types of judges to be Adjective, reverent of the law.

One federal experience was filled with Verb - Base Form, Verb - Base Form, bench memos, and gold sheets. While face time with the judge was limited, his clerks were very focused and willing to give externs impactful projects. The judge also greatly valued a lot of Noun - Plural. The extern in this position learned a lot about how the judge Verb - Past Tense other attorneys.

One state experience was filled with observation and learning from asking Noun - Plural. In this situation, face time with the judge was a common occurrence. He frequently asked for Noun - Plural and responses to court Noun - Plural. The amount time spent with the judge lent itself well to asking questions that Verb - Past Tense us to get to know each other on a personal level.

Overall, we would rate our judicial externship experiences as an Adjective experience all around.