Rascal By Ben M

Losing a friend is not always easy. It can happen if you or your friend moves away or changes schools. But can you _____Verb_____ how hard it would be to _____Adverb_____ let go of your best friend? Do you think you would be able to do it? Sterling has had Rascal for almost a year, and he realizes Rascal is growing up. Rascal is getting more _____Verb_____, getting into fights, and is trying to start a family. Sterling thinks he is being selfish by keeping Rascal any longer than her has, and knows he will have to let Rascal go free soon. He had finally finished his _____Noun_____, and decides to take rascal down the river and let him go there. As I read this, I thought, _____interjection_____! Dont do it! But in spite of my hopes, he went _____Preposition_____ ahead and did it anyway. He packs a picnic lunch and starts _____Verb - Present ends in ING_____ downstream. As he did, I was thinking, Hell never do it. Rascal is his best friend. But, of course, I was wrong. Sterling waits until the moon comes up, and hears what he is hoping for. It is a female raccoon, looking for a mate. Rascal hears it _____Conjunction_____ goes to the prow of the canoe and calls back. After about a minute, _____Pronoun_____ jumps off the canoe and swims to shore. Some people can freely let go of their best friends. Personally, I dont think I could _____Adverb_____ do it. It takes hard determination and courage, not to mention much perseverance.
