Rascal By Andrew Hasik

Abandoning someone can lead to a new life or to new sorrow. Without that somebody, you may be joyful, or in grief. Rascal, Sterlings _____Animal_____, did just that. Rascal was a wild raccoon, living in the forest with his family. He was a typical raccoon, but one day a _____Noun_____ stole him. Sterling North, the child who took Rascal, raised the raccoon as if he were a human. _____Pronoun_____ fed him some of his _____Adjective_____ breakfast, took him around town, and slept with him at night. How much better could a raccoons life get? All though Rascal had everything he needed, he may mot have enjoyed the _____Noun_____ lifestyle. He may have thought, I cant get back to my family, so Ill stay with this kid. _____First Name of a Person_____ took Rascal on adventures throughout the town, and they explored different areas. Many important events occurred during Rascal and Sterlings life together. Rascal needed a leash, collar, and cage to keep him out of trouble. _____Pronoun_____ also needed to stay in his cage for two weeks when people believed Rascal had rabies. The two had a great life together, but one day, Rascal ended it. Rascal was riding with _____Proper Noun_____ in their canoe, when he suddenly spotted something. He witnessed the most beautiful thing in his entire life. _____Pronoun_____ saw a female raccoon. Rascal was exciting about this sight, and thought about leaving. He thought about abandoning his friend for this raccoon. Stop, Sterling quickly stated. He didnt want his friend to leave. _____Proper Noun_____ didnt listen, gave a farewell signal, and jumped out of the canoe. Sterling realized he should let him go. He should let him live his life. Rascal _____Verb - Base Form_____ _____Adverb_____ to shore and met the new _____Animal_____. Sterling knew it was good for Rascal to abandon him, and to live his new life with the raccoon. Sterling gave a goodbye to Rascal, never to see the raccoon again. With abandoning someone you can feel the pain. You may also feel the joy of moving _____Preposition_____ to someone or something different.
