

I Have Lived a Thousand Years GO

1. Noun - Plural
2. Adverb
3. Verb - Past Tense
4. Adjective
5. Pronoun
6. Interjection
7. Conjunction
8. Preposition

I Have Lived a Thousand Years GO

_____ Noun - Plural in the world do horrible things to one another because of their race, religions, and political beliefs. The Holocaust of the 1940s was a perfect example of this. Elli was _____ Adverb affected by this tragedy. Her life was pretty good until the Germans _____ Verb - Past Tense her, her family, _____ Adjective citizens of Hungary, and, well, all the Jews they could get their hands on. They shipped them off to the ghettos, overcrowded, unsanitary towns where the Jewish were forced to live. Despite all this bad, Elli managed to find light in this dark, dreary place. A boy has caught her eye, and she was focused on _____ Pronoun and her new friends who won't criticize her and then: _____ interjection! Elli's dad was taken away from the ghetto along with many other innocent Jewish men living in the ghetto, _____ Conjunction now Elli and her family are being shipped off to Auschwitz too, but before leaving, Elli decides to give a trusted guard her beloved book of poems. There's no way _____ Preposition going to labor or concentration camps, because if Elli or any of the Jews who lived in the ghetto were to protest they would be killed on the spot. Life is just going to get rougher and rougher for Elli, and it's all because of Hitler. It shows that people do horrible, unspeakable things to one another, just because of their differences.