Welcome to New York

One day I was Adjective Verb-Present ends in ING through the airport. It was the one family vacation we had every year, so everyone was hoping we caught our flight to Location. Suddenly I dropped my Noun. I couldn't believe how Adjective I had been! Picking it up, I looked around to find my family. In relief, I saw someone with the same Noun as my dad, and followed him. I handed the Noun my ticket and rushed onto the plane. The man next to me was speaking a forien language so I simply put on my head phones and listened to the soothing sound of my Noun. Once the plane had landed, I Verb-Past Tense into the airport. My family was nowhere to be seen. I went up to the front desk and looked at the sign: "Welcome to New York."
