It happened to me

_____Noun_____ come and go but _____Noun_____ you are stuck with for the rest of your _____Noun_____. Some _____Noun_____ might disagree with this assessment saying " you can just _____Verb - Base Form_____ out or stop _____Verb - Present ends in ING_____ with them", but I know differently. I all started in 1980 when my soon to be step _____Noun_____ entered my _____Noun_____. My new _____Noun_____ to be was the same age as I and the prospect of having a _____Noun_____ was quite exciting. Finally someone to hang out with, play video games, _____Verb - Base Form_____, _____Verb - Base Form_____, _____Noun_____ and cause trouble with. The later became to _____Verb - Base Form_____ of our relationship.

My brother, John and I found many _____Adjective_____ escapades to enjoy together. Disappearing for hours only to come back home covered head to toe in mud. We apparently had found the only quick sand in _____Proper Noun_____, Maine. I guess we felt _____Adjective_____ lucky to have _____Verb - Past Tense_____ and didn't think we should clean off before coming into the house. Pretending to _____Verb - Base Form_____ over the "molten lava" by crossing utility lines that _____Verb - Past Tense_____ the main _____Proper Noun_____ to our volcanic island was an adventure. Each trying there hardest to _____Adjective_____ to other off the _____Adjective_____ wire. In recollection, I wonder how we determined whether those lines were live or not? Needless to say, we _____Verb - Past Tense_____ and so did our _____Noun_____. As we grew,our differences grew as well. No longer did the tom boy in me want to climb _____Noun_____ and shoot beebees at the _____Noun_____ _____Noun_____. I wanted to hang with the _____Noun_____ and discuss the _____Noun_____ not hang out with them. Unfortunately, our _____Noun_____ _____Verb - Past Tense_____ and _____Verb - Past Tense_____ on but the memories of the few years of having a sibling linger on.
