Al-Qaida Zombies-Clayton Breneman

The day that I got deployed was fun but also kind of scary. Leaving the _____^{Noun}_____ was the hardest part because we had to leave our families knowing that we may never see them again. When we got onto the massive _____^{Noun}_____ and left the reality really set in. 10 hours later we landed in a remote part of _____^{Location}_____. It was dark when we arrived. We knew nothing of the mission that we were being sent to do, all we knew that it was a highly classified _____^{Event}_____ _____^{Event}_____. When we stepped of the plane an eerie fog _____^{Verb}_____ in and we could hear groans. We all looked at each other and were wondering what we have got ourselves into. Then out of nowhere _____^{Adjective}_____ zombie came _____^{Verb ending in ing}_____ out of the fog toward us. He was covered in blood and pale. We told it to stop but when it kept running we opened _____^{Verb}_____ but it kept _____^{Verb ending in ing}_____ toward us. It finally dropped after about 30 rounds from an _____^{Noun}_____. We immediately went back into the plane and asked our sergeant what that thing was. He told us that it was an Al-Qaida zombie and this was the special operation that we had signed up for. He told us that our mission objective was to clear an old Al-Qaida weapons _____^{Noun}_____ and that a few days ago was overrun by zombies. He also told us not to get bit or we would turn into _____^{Plural noun}_____ and would have to be shot. And then he told us good luck and to proceed with the _____^{Noun}_____.
