The Capture of MammalMan

Once upon a time, there was a spy named           Proper Noun          .           Proper Noun           was eating at           Proper Noun           when she got a call from her boss on her           Noun          . Her boss said, "We have a robbery on 42nd street!"           Proper Noun           jumped up from her           Food           and ran to her           Noun          . She pushed Number           buttons and was off. When she finally arrived at the scene of the crime,           Proper Noun realized the robber was long gone, with the most expensive           Noun           in the world! Or at least, that's what she thought until she saw the edge of a           Piece of Clothing                     Verb - Base Form           around the corner. "I know what this means!"           Proper Noun           exclaimed. "It's           Proper Noun          !"           Proper Noun           jumped back into the           Proper Noun                     Proper Noun          , pushed           Number           buttons, and was once again off, chasing           Proper Noun           through the streets of           Proper Noun                     Proper Noun           City. Finally, she caught up to           Proper Noun           and pulled him into her car by his           Piece of Clothing          . "Oiwww! What'd'ja do thyaht fohh?" Instead of answering,           Proper Noun           tied up           Proper Noun           and left him in front of the police station. She then returned to           Proper Noun           and finished her           Food          .
