How Day and Nick Met, Part 3

Despite Day being the person that Nick met after his move to Hickory, they didn't get around to verb - Present ends in ING until two years later. Over the course of those years, their paths would cross occasionally and, surrounded by their Noun - Plural, a friendship developed. Nick Verb - Present ends being being when he knew Day would be hanging out and wondered if she felt the same. They shared aability to communicate with just a glance and always took pride in making each other laugh (and that was often).
It wasn't until after making the decision to move to for graduate school that Day and Nick wised up and began to more time together. That is when they both realized how great their connection had become, and they weren't ready to let it go.
After a little over years of becoming masters of the long-distance relationship and then a few years of being together in Tuscaloosa, Day and Nick are looking forward to this summer!
