Another Pokemon-day

One day Your Name

went out with Friend to catch some Pokemon. They decided that on a Adjective day like this, the Grass Pokemon were sure to be out in Color Forest. They got their Pokeballs and set off. They really wanted a Pokemon to complete their collection. They were very Adjective when they heard the call of the Pokemon they really wanted. But to their surprise, a giant Number Higher than

foot tall Second Pokemon came bursting through the foliage! It eyed them and snorted. They were scared Adjective with fright. All of the sudden Your Name made a run for it. The big Pokemon left Your Friend behind and went chasing after you! You heard trees snapping and the earth shaking as the big Pokemon pounced towards you. You figure you can stall it just long enough to Verb if you put it in your last Pokeball. You know it's so powerful it will escape but it might buy you some time. So to save your Noun you throw your last Pokeball at it. Number less than 10 seconds later you hear it burst open and the big Pokemon is on your trail again. You see a stream ahead. You figure you're about Any Number feet ahead and if you jump in the river you can throw it off your Noun

. You see it coming towards the river and you go under the calm water. You wait as long as you can without air and peek up to see the Pokemon gone. But then you remember your friend! You hear Him scream. You send out your most powerful Pokemon with you which happens to be your trustworthy Powerful Pokemon

. You come back to the site where you see your friend up against a tree as the big Pokemon growls and shows its teeth. Your Same Powerful Pokemon attacks using Powerful Pokemon Attack and the big Monster faints. You escape and get back to your town of City/Town where you live where you try to tell everyone of the giant Pokemon who chased you but no one believes you. "Something you say when you're frustrated

", you say. Oh well there's always next time!
