Latest Pirates Trade Rumor!

Breaking news! The Pirates are, it appears, major players for Justin Upton. It seems _____Pirates front office employee_____ was in Chicago last weekend to see him play. Of course, the Pirates representative might also have been there to see _____Cubs pitcher_____ or perhaps _____former Cubs pitcher_____ or maybe even _____imprisoned former Illinois public official_____. Sources say at least three other teams are interested in Upton, although _____ludicrously dumb former GM of team other than Pirates_____ tells us it might be as many as _____number between ten and twenty_____ or perhaps even _____number over a hundred_____.

My outlet and I have never seemed the slightest bit interested in Pirates fans before and probably know less about the Bucs than _____Penguins or Steelers commentator_____ knows about _____adjectival form of name of Asian or South American country such as Japanese or Peruvian_____ architecture. Nonetheless, now that the Bucs make great copy, we're positive that the Pirates absolutely must make a trade for Upton or _____home-run derby participant this year who isnt Andrew McCutchen_____ before the deadline, regardless of whether it makes any sense. But they must preserve the future of their team and avoid trading Gerrit Cole, Jameson Taillon, Starling Marte, _____mediocre Pirates Class A pitcher_____ or _____retired former Pirates first-round draft bust_____, or else they're screwed. If it turns out Upton is unavailable, the Pirates will undoubtedly turn their attention toward _____star player who isnt on trade market_____.

But eh, whatever. It doesn't matter what we publish. Some blogger will run with it. Good thing we make _____absurdly large number_____ dollars more than they do.
