More stories at WordBlanks.com

Treehouse in Space

1. Preposition Or Subordinating Conjunction _____

Treehouse in Space

Once upon a time, a tree house gloriously trawled space in an enigmatic and aloof manner.

Suddenly and without prior warning, the leaves upon the tree turned pink, then beige and back to burgundy.

It was quite a sight to behold, of course, for anyone who happened to be in space and able to be within close enough proximity to said tree to gauge a good view, because of course, a tree is far too small an object to be detected by astronomers in an observatory, let alone by the naked eye.

Unbeknownst to the reader, the events that unfolded upon the Tuesday before the present story takes place were extremely uneventful, almost so as if that it would be a complete waste to mention that anything happened on Tuesday, but they were just told to you, without consent, regardless of any impact that it could have inflicted upon your life.

All of a sudden and not quite suddenly _____Preposition or subordinating conjunction_____ all, more so, at the begging of the third paragraph, the story ended.

©2026 WordBlanks.com · All Rights Reserved.