Freshman Horror

1998, it was the first week of high school. She had thought that everything would go swell like what she saw in the movies. However, it was the opposite of that. She had gotten lost in her school, had to switch to 15 lockers, and even walk around the whole entire school shoeless. She felt as if she was Verb - Present Tense herself in front of everyone. She was late to class almost everyday because she couldn't Verb her locker. In addition, when she had her first day of gym, she had trouble with opening her locker, then she Verb - Past Tense that she was at the wrong locker number. Once she ended up at her right locker she still couldn't open. She then ended up asking someone for Noun and had her locker opened. After getting Verb - Past Tense she set her Noun in the locker and closed the locker. Sadly, when she tried closing her locker she then noticed that her locker was Verb - Past Participle in with her backpack. Because her locker she was Adjective to class. After Proper Noun Noun had to go to her gym teachers office and ask for a screw driver to open. Ms. Proper Noun told Proper Noun that she had to pay Number cents for it, but Margret money was in her locker. The teacher told Margret to take off her right shoe and to leave it in the office until her locker was open. Once Proper Noun had her locker opened she had felt relieved, but yet Verb - Past Participle. After Noun - Plural long and Verb - Present Tense day, she had looked back at what had happened and had laughed all about it. She knew that it was her fault and that stuff like this happens to everyone.
