Communication

When studying communication it can help to use a There are many diffrent types of paradigms out there for example there is which emphasiszes the way audiences use mass communication. Another paradigm is the Adjective Adjective Noun which examines the power of relationships is what we call the news role of media in which we have Adjective Noun and instrumental surveilaince. Beware sureveilaince occurs when there is terrorisms or important information everybody needs to know. Proper Noun Noun has to do with information about everyday life, such as Nbc Nightly News. When watching a news program it is important that they have so you can trust what they preach. Some news stations such as WGAL channel 8 hold telethons to try and raise money for children who are needy or sick this is called Some stations even participate in, they will go out an take part in certain events and share the values of the people there. When you talk to someone about the news or about a show this is called Noun Some people can even get Noun when talking about the topic. When a person gets attached to a newscaster on tv this is called a Adjective Noun some people even refer to them as a freind they see everyday. Even so people will treat them like they're a guest in there house and even end up to themselves from a situation such as taking out the trash. people use all the time such as tee shirts or beaches. Texts all have meanings or things people take away with them from the text.
Sometimes people use text for such as a political campaign or election. people think they can say what ever they want but they can't always get away with it.
