Alice in Wonderland One

`Here! you may nurse it a bit, if you like!' the Duchess said to Alice,	baby at her as she spoke. `I must go and get ready to play croquet with the Queen,' and she	_ out of the room. The cook a frying-pan after her as she went out, but it just missed her.
Alice caught the baby with some difficulty, as it was a queer-shaped creature, and l	held out its arms and legs in all directions, `just like a,' thought Alice. The poorAdjective	thing was ng itself up
and straightening itself out again, so that altogether, for the first minute or two, it was as much as she	could do to hold it.
As soon as she had made out the proper way of it, (which was to twist it	up into a sort of knot, and then keep tight hold of its right ear and left foot, so as to prevent its undoing itself,)	she carried it out into the open air. `If I don't take this child away with me,' thought Alice, `they're sure to	/ erb - it in a day or two: wouldn't it be murder to leave it behind?' She said the last words out l	loud, and the Adjective Noun grunted in reply (it had left off Verb - Present ends in ING by t	his time).
`Don't grunt,' said Alice; `that's not at all a proper way of expressing yourself.'
The baby grunted again, and Alice looked very into its face to see what was the matter.	ter with it.
There could be no doubt that it had a very turn-up nose, much more like a than a real	nose; also its eyes were getting extremely small for a baby: altogether Alice did not like the look of the thing at all. `But perhaps it was only, she thought, and looked into its eyes again, to see if there were any tears.

No, there were no tears. `If you're going to turn into a pig, my dear,' said Alice,, `I'll have nothing more to do with you. Mind now!' The Adjective thing sobbed again (or grunted
, it was impossible to say which), and they went on for some while in silence.
