Director David and the two greenies

Once, in the very recent past, there was a Director. His name was David - Director David. He lived far far away from normal civilization, in the wilds of Alaska's Arctic. There he had taken his lovely, _____Adjective_____, and kind wife, Cindy to create a _____Adjective_____ life close to wilderness adventures.

All was going well until a climate induced tornado hit his village! The tornado picked him up off the street and whirled and swirled him around and around and up and up. He saw _____Adjective_____ _____Noun - Plural_____ and _____Noun - Plural_____ spinning above and below him in the whirly blurly tornado. Just as he was about to pass out, he was splooshed into a large but _____Adjective_____ pile of coal ash in a strange and _____Adjective_____ place with large _____Adjective_____ stacks emitting gray clouds of poison. He got up, brushed off the ash, and asked a stranger where he was and was shocked to learn he had landed in Fairbanks!

His first thought was of Cindy, his beloved Cindy! She would be so worried about him and frightened about where he was. He wandered the streets until he came to the only friendly and _____Adjective_____ place in town - the Northern Alaska Environmental Center! He ventured inside and was greeted by a young woman and man - Jenna and Pete. They were quite welcoming and _____Verb - Past Tense_____ to see this _____Verb - Past Tense_____ and dusty man walk in the door. They recognized him as Director David. You see, Director David was famous around the globe as a strong and _____Adjective_____ thinker and _____Adjective_____. Jenna and Pete assumed he was at the Center to become their new Director and they were filled with _____Noun_____. David shared his story and made it clear that he must get back to his Cindy.

Jenna and Pete immediately took action - they almost magically manifested a large pile of _____Adjective_____ for an extreme adventure to the arctic. Pete was _____Adjective_____ and kept asking if there were any _____Noun - Plural_____ along they way they'd need to climb and Jenna had her pack raft on her back ready to get the trio across and _____Noun - Plural_____ in their way. They set out right away to get to Cindy, alone in the far north.

They were all experienced in the wilds and kept a _____Adjective_____ pace, following Pete and his lickity split ways. Jenna made sure they all _____Verb - Past Tense_____ and absorbed the views and _____Noun - Plural_____ once in awhile and convinced them to wear silly _____Noun - Plural_____ and lay in the tundra to appreciate the space they were in. Upon sharing their stories while hiking, they found the all had close birthdays. Jenna organized a potluck right away. Pete brought a sandwich and _____Noun - Plural_____, David didn't eat, and Jenna caught a salmon with her bare hands and cooked it stuffed with Labrador needles and served with a _____Adjective_____ sauce.

As if overnight, they made it to Director David's village! Rumor flew around the village, as they do in small towns, that three people were _____Verb - Past Tense_____ in to town. Cindy joined the crowd to see who it was, quietly hoping it was her husband, lost to the tornado. Their eyes met from 100 yards apart. They began to run to each other, David's hair blowing in the wind - Cindy walking gingerly and slow - recovering from a recent surgery.

They embraced and David announced he would be the new Director at the Northern Center!! Cindy cheered!

Jenna and Pete sang kumbaya.
