How We Met

By the principle of:

Robot = MD ...the internet ...where else?

Bridget, in her _____Adjective_____ nature, tries okcupid because it is a free _____Verb - Present ends in ING_____ site. Since she never does anything half-heartedly, why should online dating be any different. She filled out more _____Noun_____ than medical school. Bridget wrote a fifteen-page _____Noun_____ on her life, personality, faults, spiritual gifts, preferences, gripes and all cards on the table. Additionally, she wanted to ensure the _____Adjective_____ possible statistical match and finished over 5000 multiple choice _____Noun_____ quizzes. She then _____Verb - Past Tense_____ anyone who did not match these characteristics... and that is NOT how she met Hans .

Hans decided to try okcupid because it is _____Adjective_____. Hans only answered 10 questions and statistically they were not in the same _____Noun_____. Also, Bridget's filter and search _____Noun_____ were so precise that she did not show up in any of his searches. While browsing one day, okcupid decided to _____Verb - Base Form_____ Bridget in a _____Adjective_____ algorithm that compares profile criteria. Since she had written nearly _____Number_____ miles of details, it's not clear how many times the server crashed while trying to _____Verb - Base Form_____ the correlation.

According to okcupid statistics, Hans and Bridget were:

32% _____Noun_____, 44% _____Noun_____, 33% _____Noun_____

...statistical variance ...pssssshh, what do they know?

Hans'

_____Adjective_____ email: "I understand I'm flagged as warning... ?... I don't believe in standardized tests; want to go on a _____Noun_____?"

Bridget's qualifier: Hans _____Verb - Past Tense_____ all of her profile (which took effort... did we mention it was _____Number_____ miles?), and he recited several sections for months afterward.

Hans' qualifier: Bridget was not _____Verb - Past Tense_____ by his mega-fantastic flatbed _____Noun_____. On the contrary she could not wait to set up a second _____Noun_____.
