Once upon a time, there was an Adjective orange team and the purple team wished they were like them. The orange team was so amazing. The purple team looked up to the orange team because they were expressives. The orange team was always Verb - Present Tense the purple team up with their cool Noun - Plural, if only they weren't so boring like an analytical. Then one day a purple team member tossed a lucky penny into a sparkling Noun. She closed her Noun - Plural, wished with all her Noun that the orange and purple team could just become Noun - Plural. All a sudden she woke up from her childish dream. That day when she got to class everyone was acting like an Adjective. They were easy to get along with and pleasant.
