Bullying Issues

I couldn't help noticing that _____ Adjective _____ First Name of a Person was being forced to give that bully all his money. "Hey, you little insect," he had said, smirking as Johnny _____ Adverb showed all his change.

I could see that another guy was _____ Verb - Present ends in ING a little girl. Was this place like a bully convention or something? I didn't understand. True, we were on the playground, but that didn't mean we were like a little whale with coins for _____ Animal (plural). It wasn't fair that they were _____ Verb - Present Tense advantage of us just because no adults were around.

A little boy seemed to wail for her mom to come here, but I couldn't make out what he was saying because he was crying so hard. Apparently, the deal about bullies would expire at the end of the school day.

I decided to intervene this _____ Noun. I talked to my parents about the playground after the end of the school day. I conversed with them about what was going on. I talked about how once there had been a boy giving a wale to a boy with a _____ Noun, and how a little boy _____ Adverb ran sobbing into the road intrsection and nearly got ran over.

My dad said that it wouldn't be too hard to stop them because they weren't in a dangerous part of town, like a busy avenue.

A few days later, I was _____ Adjective not to perspire when I approached the playground. The bullies had gone away, after my parents talking over the phone to the school, who identified them in no time at all.

I was glad to stay on the swings and _____ Animal bars. The bullies wouldn't come for a loooooong while.
