Declaration

We hold these truths to be self-e	vident, that all men are _	Verb - Past Participle	Adjective ,	that they are endowed by their Creator with c	ertain Adjective I	Rights, that among these	are Life, Liberty	and the pursuit of Proper Noun	That to secure these right	s, Governments are instit	tuted among Men	, deriving their just powers from the conse	nt of the governed,Tha	t whenever any Form of	Government beco	omes destructive of these ends, it is the	e Right of the People to a	alter or to abolish it, and	to institute new _	Noun , laying its foundation on such pri	nciples and organizing it	s powers in such form, a	s to them shall see	em most likely to effect their	and Happiness. Prude	ence, indeed, will dictate	that Noun - Plur	long established should not be change	ed for light and transient	causes; and accordingly	all experience hat	h shewn, that mankind are more disposed to _	verb , while evils	are, th	an to right thems	elves by abolishing the forms to which th	ey are accustomed. But v	when a long train of abus	es and usurpation	s, pursuing invariably the same Object evino	es a design to reduce the	m under Adjective	Despotism, it is	s their right, it is their duty, to throw off such G	overnment, and to provide	de new Guards for their f	uture Noun	Such has been the patient sufferance of	f these Colonies; and suc	ch is now the necessity w	hich constrains th	nem to alter their former Systems of Government	ment. The history of the p	oresent King of Great Bri	itain is a history o	f repeated injuries and usurpations, all havi	ng in direct object the es	tablishment of an absolu	te Noun	over these States. To prove this, let Facts be	e submitted to a	ctive world.
