Once upon a time there was a           Noun           named George.           Pronoun           was a very special           Noun           because he could poop out gold nuggets. George's owner was named Doug. Doug was actually very evil, and           Pronoun           stole George from the black market in           Proper Noun          . George didn't like Doug very much because he made George poop out nuggets every day and every hour. Doug was planning to sell the nuggets until he had enough money to buy the most expensive           Coordinating conjunction           biggest lollipop in the world, which costs $          Number          . One day, George was feeling very sore, so he ran away. He           Adverb                     Verb - Past Tense                     Particle           the nearest tree and jumped off.           Determiner          ! Magical pink fairy wings came out of his back and flew him           Preposition or subordinating conjunction           the ocean to his home in Cuba. When George got there, he met a very           Adjective           lady           Noun          . George likes when his women are           Adjective           because he likes the soft fur. George introduced           Pronoun           to the           Noun          . He found out her name was Bertha. Bertha had the features of a chipmunk that was hit by a           Noun          . Bertha asked George if he wanted to go play Crazy 8's. Of course, George           Adverb           agreed. After a couple of hours, a land shark named Lenny came up to them and asked if he could play. Lenny scared George so much, he got the hiccups.           Noun          ! George was           Adverb                     Verb - Present Tense           out gold nuggets! Bertha thought this was a little           Adjective          . Lenny thought this was hilarious. Ever since that day, Bertha and Lenny hve caalled George Winnie-the-Pooh.
