Happy Belated Halloween, Fairfield!

Traditionally, Halloween takes place on October 31st. But this year in Fairfield, Halloween was moved to November 7th because of Hurricane First Name of a Person. And now it looks like Trick-or-Treating may be postponed again until Saturday, November 10th because of another Adjective storm coming from the sea. This has been one Adjective year for Halloween!

Riverfield students like name of classmate and name of classmate think Halloween is great no matter when it take place! All of 5R is dressed up in Adjective costumes. boy name of classmate thought about dressing up as Riverfield teacher, but he decided that was too Adjective. girl name of classmate was going to be a Animal, but she couldn't find the right kind of Part of Body. Some classmates decided to go as Noun, others are dressed up as name of a famous person. At school, we will have a parade and then head to our Adjective classroom party where our room parents will stuff us with a kind of food and give us too much a kind of drink to drink. It will be hard to get schoolwork done after that!

When the sun goes down on Saturday, Trick-or-Treating will begin. Children in costumes will travel from house to house and ask for a kind of food with the phrase " Trick or Treat!" The big trick this year is going to be keeping enough treats to give out until Saturday. School has been cancelled for more than a week and many homes were without power. It is estimated that Fairfield's young children ate Number pieces of candy a day to pass the time until their Adjective TVs and computer games came back on. Thank goodness we can finally put down the a kind of candy and pick up our pencils -- it's time to start filling our brains with Noun instead of Noun!
