The Day of the Ninja

Once, there was a very Adjective and very Adjective Noun. His name was Proper Noun. He was the Adjective - Ends in EST ninja in his Noun and was looking forward to his first Noun. One Adjective and Adjective day, the head of the Noun, Mr. T, came to Proper Noun and said, "Proper Noun, now is the Noun for your Noun. Are you Adjective?" "Yes," said Proper Noun as he Verb - Past Tense up and Verb - Past Tense his Noun Noun - Plural and Verb - Present Tense Noun - Plural. "Your Noun is to take this Noun to the Noun in the Noun over the hill. Do not get Verb - Past Participle and do not let anyone see you," Mr. T explained. Proper Noun was so Verb - Past Participle. Now was the time he could show his Noun that he really was Adjective to be a good Noun.

On the way to the castle, Fred stopped to eat lunch by a small stream. He thought "I need food to keep my energy up and water to keep my throat from getting dry. I'll just sit and rest, so that I can plan my next move." After eating and drinking until he was full, Fred accidentally fell asleep. He woke up with a start as the light of the full moon shone on his face. "On no," he thought. "I missed my chance to deliver the letter. Now I will never be able to become a real ninja." Fred was disappointed, but thought it was better to try to take the letter to the princess than to turn back to face Mr. T as a failure.

By

the light of the moon, Fred found his way silently to the moat of the castle. "Now what should I do," Fred thought.

"I can use lily pads to hide
