The Outsiders

Our gang had _____ Verb - Past Participle the Socs to their _____ Noun and heaved _____ Noun - Plural at them.

They came _____ Verb - Present Tense toward us now--- four _____ Adjective, hard guys. They were all as _____ Adjective as nails and looked it. I had grown up with them, and they _____ Verb - Past Tense me, even though I was younger, because I was Darry and Soda's kid brother and I kept my _____ Noun shut good.

Steve Randle was seventeen, _____ Coordinating conjunction and lean, with thick greasy _____ Pronoun he kept _____ Preposition or subordinating conjunction in complicated swirls. He was tacky, smart, and Soda's best buddy since grade school. Steve's specialty was _____ Noun - Plural. He could lift a _____ Noun quicker and more quietly than anyone in the neighborhood, but he also knew cars upside-down and backward, and he could drive anything on wheels. He and Soda worked at the same gas station--- Steve part time and Soda full time--- and their station got more customers than any other in town. Whether that was because Steve was so good with _____ Noun - Plural or because Soda attracted girls like honey draws flies, I couldn't tell you. I liked Steve only because he was Soda's best friend. He didn't like me--- he thought I was a _____ Adjective and a kid; Soda always took me with them when they went places if they weren't taking girls, and that bugged Steve. It wasn't my fault; Soda always asked me; I didn't ask him. Soda doesn't think I'm a kid.

Two-Bit Mathews was the oldest of the gang and the wisecracker of the bunch. He was about six feet tall, stocky in build, and very proud of his long _____ Adjective _____ Noun - Plural. He had gray eyes and a wide _____ Noun, and he couldn't stop making funny remarks to save his life. You couldn't shut up that guy; he always had to get his two-bits worth in. Hence his name. Even his teachers forgot his real name was Keith, and we hardly remembered he had one. Life was one big joke to Two-Bit. He was famous for _____ Noun and his black-handled _____ Noun (which he couldn't have acquired without his first talent), and he was always smarting off to the cops. He really couldn't help it.
