Christmas 2012

Seth turned 4 this year and has started pre-school. His two favorite parts of school are _____ Verb - Present Tense the bus and _____ Noun with the girls. We're just not sure which ranks higher yet. Along with school, Seth has also made the transition to a "big" boy bike. He loves to ride it all around our newly paved driveway (best money ever spent)! Seth also took to running _____ Noun with dad this past spring. That was until he tried to start a new trend in running backwards and needed to have three stitches in his knee after falling.

Evan, Seth's partner in crime, is our constant entertainer. He turned the big 01 and has decided that he has become bored with being an infant. He is walking almost exclusively now. We caught him pouring himself a glass of milk for breakfast one day. He's also learned some sign language. The other day he signed that he wanted to attend the University of Wisconsin- Madison.....that marked the first time dad ever wept openly.

Mom is busy as ever and is still teaching full-time at Washington Elementary in Cloquet. In between running the kids back and forth from the hospital, she is helping organize the Lumberjacks Laps Kids Fun Run for this coming spring. She's not sure what she has gotten herself into.

Dad is doing great as well. He is still working for SMDC and is staying plenty busy with projects around the house....apparently watching all the HGTV has inspired him to build a garage in the back yard this coming summer. It's a good thing he works at a hospital!
