ENGL 1102 Twilight Example

Mr. Banner shoved the tape into the reluctant VCR and walked to the wall to turn off the lights.

And then, as the room went black, I was suddenly hyperaware that Edward was sitting less than an inch from me . I was stunned by the unexpected _____Noun_____ that _____Verb - Past Participle_____ through me, amazed that it was possible to be more aware of him than I already was. A _____Adjective_____ impulse to reach over and _____Verb_____ him, to _____Noun_____ his perfect _____Noun_____ just once in the darkness, nearly overwhelmed me. I _____Verb - Past Tense_____ my arms tightly across my chest, my hands balling into fists. I was losing my _____Noun_____.

The opening credits began, lighting the room by a token amount. My _____Noun - Plural_____, of their own accord, _____Verb - Past Tense_____ to him. I _____Verb - Past Tense_____, sheepishly as I realized his _____Noun_____ was identical to mine, _____Noun - Plural_____ clenched under his arms, right down to the _____Noun - Plural_____, _____Verb - Present Tense_____ sideways at me. He _____Verb - Past Tense_____ back, his _____Noun - Plural_____ somehow managing to smolder, even in the dark. I looked away before I could start _____Verb - Present Tense_____. It was absolutely ridiculous that I should feel dizzy.

The hour seemed very long. I couldn't _____Verb_____ on the movie -- I didn't even know what _____Noun_____ it was on, I tried unsuccessfully to _____Verb_____, but the electric _____Noun_____ that seemed to be originating from somewhere in his _____Noun_____ never slackened. Occasionally I would permit myself a quick _____Noun_____ in his direction, but he never seemed to relax, either. The overpowering craving to _____Verb_____ him also refused to fade, and I crushed my _____Noun - Plural_____ safely against my ribs until my fingers were aching with the effort.

I breathed a sigh of relief when Mr. Banner flicked the lights back on at the end of class, and streched my arms out in front of me, flexing my stiff fingers. Edward chuckled beside me.
