Pablo Picassos history

Picasso's dad was an _____<sup>Noun</sup> teacher and only painted realism so when his son started painting cubism he and Picasso had a fight shortly after that Picasso moved to France.

When Picasso was older he had five periods young Picasso, blue period, rose period, black period and cubism.

You are probably wondering what all these periods are well the are periods of time where thing happen so in this case what Picasso's art looked like in certain periods of time. So lets _____<sup>Noun</sup> back to the point young Picasso was were Picasso had just started making art and (of course) he was young.

The blue period was when Picasso put blue in almost all his pictures! It was not because he was out of colors though. It was because he wanted to try something new

The the rose period was were all his painting had bright and cheery colors in them. What inspired him to make his painting brighter was that he was very happy with his relationship with his friend Fernande _____<sup>Noun</sup>.

The black period was when Picasso was trying out cubism and cubism was when Picasso and George Braques made up cubism and and did art using it. Picasso hated the war and in his paintings he reflected how he felt about it like in hi painting called Guernica it showed how German warplanes bombed Guernica. that is the history of picasso.
