The Love Story of a Lifetime

Once upon a time there was a           Noun           and a           Noun           named John and Allison. They lived in a big           Noun           and had many           Noun - Plural          , but found that deep down inside, they were           Adjective          .

Not until they met each other did they know that they           Verb - Past Tense           what they had been           Verb - Present Tense          . They knew that they           Verb - Past Tense           each other very much, and that they were meant to be           Verb - Present Tense          .

. NOT that this didn't mean that it took John           Number           years to propose. I mean, seriously. He took his sweet time. But FINALLY he came to his senses and made himself (and her!) the           Adjective - Ends in EST           people in the world. It was pretty           Adjective          , the way he did it, in front of their           Noun - Plural           at Universal Studios in Florida. So           Adjective          !
