Teddy

Jake had just finished watching the new horror movie that had just come on T.V, "Teddy Bear's Revenge".

Petrified with fear, Jake sat on the couch as the credits rolled. He moved barely enough to grab the remote and change the channel. As he began to recuperate from the terrifying movie, he heard his doorbell ring. The _____ Adjective _____ doorbell scared Jake witless as he jumped and landed on his _____ Adjective _____ wooden floor.

" _____ Interjection _____ !" he yelped when he hit the floor.

It was 11:00 p.m., who would be _____ Preposition _____ the door at this hour? He moved slowly, still shaken by the movie. When he answered the door, he saw a UPS man carrying a small package.

"Are you Jake Johnson?" asked the UPS man.

"Uh, yes... yes I am." Jake said as the delivery worker handed him the package.

"Sign here." said the UPS man as he pointed at a dotted line on his clipboard and handed it to him.

Jake signed the paper and gave the delivery worker back his pen.

"Good-bye, Mr. Johnson." said the UPS man.

_____ Conjunction like that, he went to his _____ Noun and drove off. Jake was just starting to realize what just happened. He had just gotten an unmarked package from a UPS guy in the middle of the night. Do UPS workers even work this late? Jake walked back into his home with questions _____ Verb - Present ends in ING in his head. He laid the mysterious, small box on the _____ Noun. He thought to himself, "Should I open it?", as he got out his box opener. Finally, after a minute of contemplating over what to do with the small box, his curiosity got the best of him. He _____ Adverb opened the box and looked inside. There was no wrapping paper _____ Conjunction packing peanuts, just a small teddy bear and a note.

"_____ Interjection. That's pretty _____ Adjective." He said.

Jake grabbed the teddy bear and looked at it. _____ Pronoun looked _____ Adverb normal. He then read the note.

"HELLO" it read. The greeting was written in all capital letters, with very sloppy and unorganized handwriting.

Jake then turned the paper over. "LET'S BE FRIENDS" was written in the same handwriting on the back.

"What?" Jake thought out loud.

It was just then that the teddy bear lunged forward and hung on to his face for dear life. Jake couldn't even Verb - Base Form. He struggled as the teddy bear hung on. He struggled all the way to the corner of his kitchen. The bear had him cornered. Then, the teddy bear jumped off of him as Jake sat in the corner in front of him. Jake noticed a small tear on the bear's fluffy skin. It was just then that a huge portal opened Preposition the tear. The portal sucked Jake in.

As the dust cleared, there were now two bears, each the same size, sitting next to Pronoun

Pronoun. Preposition Preposition of them was a note. The note read, in the same sloppy, unorganized handwriting, "FRIENDS FOREVER".
