One Day

It was a Adjective day on July 14, 1922. Me and all my friends were outside playing with Noun filled balloons. We were having so much fun playing in the pool of Noun. Then, we decided to take a Verb - Base Form down to Wetzels. While at Wetzels were decided to buy tic tacs, potato chips, chocolate, and 5 packs of gum. My friends Conjunction I go up to the cash register to Verb - Base Form for our items. After we paid Pronoun left the store and went back Adverb. On the way home we ate our chocolate, tic tacs, potato chips, gum. One of my friends was so focused on all the food she tripped and fell Preposition a puddle of lemonade. Now she is Adjective and sticky. By the time we got home my friend smelled like a onion. We tried to get her to smell better by dunking her in boiling tomato juice. Interjection! Maybe we shouldn't have dunked her in boiling tomato juice. To get her cooled Adverb we threw her Preposition in ice tomato juice. "Interjection!" said my friend. In the end, my friend has frostbite Conjunction smells like a tomato. At least Pronoun is not hot, sticky, and smells like an onion.
