Test Word lib

Or was that two lights and a left? Or, wait, was it - no, you should have written it down. Now you're discombobulated, your GPS is wrong, your map is old, you're late, and this part of _____Noun_____ is way beyond scary.

You hate being lost. Now imagine how your beloved pet would feel, and you understand the panic and despair on both sides of "Huck", the new boy-and-his-dog memoir by Janet Elder.

Even before he could talk, it was obvious that Janet Elder's son Michael loved animals.

Elder somewhat blamed herself. She and her husband furnished Michael with the requisite squad of stuffed animals when he was small. They indulged him when he made pets of inchworms from produce stands, and smiled when he befriended livestock while on vacation.

But Elder and her husband were steadfast when Michael asked for a dog. Though the boy _____Verb - Past Tense_____ and _____Verb - Past Tense_____, a _____Noun_____ meant a lot of work and time. Both Elder and her husband had demanding jobs and they lived in a New York City apartment without a yard, so the answer was always "no".

Until Elder was diagnosed with breast cancer. Like the journalist she is, she gathered facts and accepted treatment but her stoicism ended with her son. Thinking that Michael - and the entire family - might need a _____Noun_____, Elder and her husband decided that something _____Noun_____ and four-legged might be just right .
